About Us

The North Carolina Conservation Network (NCCN) is a statewide organization of over sixty organizations across the state. Our work focuses on protecting public health and the environment. Recognizing our role, we embarked on an effort in 2019 to focus more in the area of environmental justice.

It is important as we move forward that we understand what the needs of low-income communities and communities of color are and how we, through our affiliates and partners, may assist those communities. It is our goal to introduce ourselves to communities with which we have not previously interacted. We want to work with you to improve public health and the environment in the places that you live.

We hope that this fact sheet will provide you with information on who the NCCN is and what they do. We look forward to creating collaborations between NCCN and you. With your help, we will aim to elevate the concerns of impacted communities and opportunities to support policies and actions that address those concerns.

The Time Is Now

We recognize that we are living in a time when we must all come together to identify common goals and reach a successful resolution. We want to join your community efforts to bring attention to the concerns of your community and help you solve them.

We Are Here To Help

The North Carolina Conservation Network can or may be able to assist you with the following services:

- Providing training opportunities throughout the year on topics including advocacy, organizing, fundraising, and more.
- Acting as a catalyst for coordination of environmental community efforts, including linking organizations together to form coalitions.
- Supporting issue campaigns by engaging North Carolinians to take action through contacting decision-makers, attending hearings, and participating in offline activities.
